

and Notice and Note

When you're reading and suddenly a character realizes, understands, or finally figures something out...you should stop and ask yourself:

"How might this change things?"

- If the character figured out a problem, you probably just learned the conflict.
- If the character understood a life lesson, you probably just learned the theme.